NOTE

HENRY LEWIS BULLEN, BORN IN BALLARAT, AUSTRALIA, in 1857, became associated with the newly formed American Type Founders Company in 1892, at a time when the first major change in printing—the successful setting of type by machine—had been made in more than 400 years. He was both a witness of and a participant in many of the dislocations and also advancements which followed the introduction of the machine in the craft of setting printers' types. Much of what he witnessed and learned by intensive study went into his serial unsigned "Discursions of a Retired Printer" of 1906-1908.

In 1918 he began his notable "Collectanea Typographica," another serial, which attracted wide attention because of the enthusiasm and devotion and erudition which these bright little fragments exhibited. The 8 years which followed were Bullen's happiest and also his most productive. He was an international figure in the history and literature of printing, and the recipient of honors at home and abroad.

Then, in 1926, the world which Henry Lewis Bullen knew and loved began to come apart. His fast friend and patron, Robert Wickham Nelson, president of the American Type Founders Company for a quarter of a century, died on July 28. Other great figures in the company whom Bullen knew intimately followed. Linn Boyd Benton and Walter S. Marder died in 1932;

Joseph F. Gillick and Joseph Warren Phinney died in 1935; Frank B. Berry died in 1937. Finally, the great company itself, which Bullen over the years no doubt had looked upon as impregnable, began to falter. It went into bankruptcy in 1933 and lost its ancient home plant in Jersey City in 1935. The bankruptcy was lifted in the latter year, but in the sere and bitter years of the thirties Bullen must have felt lonely and dispirited. Most of the great figures he had known were gone, and the magnificent printers' library which he had built up for the American Type Founders Company was ordered sold in 1936. When the company moved to Elizabeth, New Jersey, in 1935 the big library was left in Jersey City, and for more than a year Bullen remained alone with his books in the vast, silent building that had once bustled with activity as the world's largest type foundry. A new order had taken over in the company: the man who had succeeded Joseph F. Gillick as president in 1932 was, for the first time since 1901, when John E. Searles, a banker, relinquished the presidency to Nelson, a man from the outside and a stranger to type founding.

Bullen ceased to write the "Collectanea Typographica" in July, 1926, the month in which Nelson died; he returned to the work in September, 1928, and then abandoned it forever in June, 1931. None of the pieces written after 1926 display the sparkle, exuberance and affection for the craft which had characterized the pieces written between 1918 and 1926. The happy years had departed. In his last work, the catalogue of titles for sale from the American Type Founders Company library in 1936, Bullen looked down the dim corridors of the years to his happy days with Robert Wickham Nelson and observed sadly: "The difficulties of the A. T. F. Co. began when he died."

Bullen himself died on April 27, 1938. Ten years later the president of the American Type Founders Company, in an address detailing the history and achievements of the company, referred to him as "Robert L. Bullen."

NEW FEATURES FOR 1918.

THE INLAND PRINTER takes pleasure in announcing several new features, starting with this issue, which, we believe, will prove of great interest and benefit to our many readers.

A special department, under the title "Collectanea Typographica," will be devoted to short comments on the literary and historical sides of printing. This will be under the direction of Henry L. Bullen, librarian of the Typographic Library and Museum, Jersey City, New Jersey, who is too well known to our readers as an authority on matters pertaining to the historical side of printing to need introduction. Questions regarding historical and biographical matters will be answered through this department.

BULLEN TO RETURN!

The above announcement heralds the fact that Henry L. Bullen's great "Collectanea" department is to be resumed in THE INLAND PRINTER for September and marks that issue with very special significance.

Thousands of our subscribers will be thrilled with the news that they are to be privileged again to sit at the feet, so to speak, of one of the best-informed men on printing topics in the world.

To read Bullen is to achieve a knowledge of printing equivalent to a master's degree in science. Indeed, if a place were to be chosen to supply the facilities for instruction essential to such a degree in printing it would undoubtedly be the Typographic Library and Museum of the American Type Founders Company at Jersey City. And it would not be necessary to go beyond the four walls of that institution to find a man to head the faculty. Henry L. Bullen, the man, is not only the librarian of this great institution, but the one who assembled it—selected it item by item.

It is not just to know things, however, that you should read Bullen carefully, seriously, regularly. There is inspiration in every word; you will be imbued with belief in the nobility of your craft or business, however you look upon printing. Bullen is as capable a commentator on the business angle of printing as he is on its books, presses and type.

The start of Mr. Bullen's new series begins in September. Don't miss it.

MONOGRAPH 66

This check list was set and printed at the Doomsday Press in Rochester, Minnesota, by James Eckman, its compiler.

Typography: 11-point Linotype Janson 118; display, ATF Satanick (printed in Janecke-Schneemann's Anker Red No. 3). Satanick was used in the heading of the "Collectanea Typographica" department in The Inland Printer throughout the series. It was designed in 1896 by John F. Cumming, of Worcester, Massachusetts, perhaps at the instance of Joseph Warren Phinney, of the Boston branch of the American Type Founders Company.

Paper: 70-pound basis Ticonderoga Text, supplied by Mr. Harry C. Carpenter, Jr., of the Carpenter Paper Company of Minneapolis.

Edition: 400 copies printed for The Typophiles, August, 1961.
